

Police Stalking, Police Criminality, and Human Rights

How new policing methods can undermine the rule of law and modern liberal judicial philosophy

The Secret Torture Dimension of Police Stalking: From Noise Harassment to Directed Energy Weapons

by Reidar Visser

Although police stalking operations may involve parts of a local community (<https://web.archive.org/web/20160922100611/https://policestalking.wordpress.com/2012/09/26/what-does-police-stalking-look-like/>), whenever the victim is out and about, 95% of the illegalities usually go on away from the gaze of the public. In some cases, police stalking is primarily about harassment directed at the place where the stalking victim lives, throughout the day as well as during the night.

I'll recapitulate briefly how these harassment techniques evolved in my case – from very primitive methods often used by European police against gangs and drug dealers, to ultra-modern, little-known capabilities spearheaded by the United States for crowd-control purposes.

To begin with, in Oslo in February 2011, the disturbance techniques were rather unsophisticated and mostly carried out through the use of unmarked police cars. A group of 10 to 15 cars kept driving in circle around my flat whenever I was home and basically made a lot of noise. At night they parked one of the cars just beneath the window of my bedroom and kept the engine running for hours. Sometimes the police officers stepped out of the car and shouted to wake me up. At the time I was terrified and could not think of any effective antidote, so I was unable to get much sleep.

(<https://web.archive.org/web/20160922100611/https://policestalking.files.wordpress.com/2012/10/lillebislett.jpg>).

The street where Oslo police harassed me every night in March 2011

When I began travelling in March 2011, I made sure to get hotel rooms away from the street. The police then began slamming the doors in neighbouring rooms to wake me up at night. For example, in Huis ter Duin in the Netherlands where I stayed between July 2011 and January 2012, I had room 568 in the older section of hotel complex, also known as the “grand hotel”. Even though most of that building was unoccupied outside the tourist season, the police gained access to rooms 466 and 468 right under me and used those rooms as a base for harassing me. The techniques included regularly slamming the balcony door shut, constant slamming with closet doors for periods of 30 to 40 minutes, and hammers used directly on the ceiling (i.e. the floor of my room) to wake me up at night.

(<https://web.archive.org/web/20160922100611/https://policestalking.files.wordpress.com/2012/10/grandhotelhuisterduin.jpg>).
My room at Huis ter Duin in Noordwijk, the Netherlands, from July 2011 to January 2012

Other aspects of the harassment in Hotel Huis ter Duin were more peculiar than painful. They included the use of an antiquated water system which made significant noise in all the toilets that shared the same pipe whenever one toilet was flushed (i.e. rooms on a vertical line from the first to the fifth floor). For hours the police would flush the toilet with a frequency of up to once every minute (I have tape recordings of this). The same technique was used for special effect when they woke me up at night by slamming the doors. When I got up and went to the bathroom there would often be a flush exactly when I entered. Obviously the chances of such a coincidence occurring naturally in the middle of the night when only 5 rooms share the same pipe (and when they are officially unoccupied anyway) are very small. Incidentally, the successful use of this method also shows the extent to which CCTV is being used to monitor me, since without it, no such precision hits would have been possible.

When I moved to a private apartment in Maasdam in February 2012, it appeared that the original plan of the police was to disturb me from cars in the main street. To some extent they could do this without fear of a negative response from the local community since most of the neighbours were elderly ladies who were nearly deaf. However, I effectively managed to shut out noise from the street by playing loud music at day and turning on the extractor fan in the living room/kitchen where I slept at night. This prompted a change of tactics by the police. The only other options they had left for disturbing me using traditional methods was from the roof and from the garage. They opted for the garage. From April onwards, they put a vehicle with a heavy engine in the garage two floors down every night. When I went to sleep, they began revving its engine again and again, much in the way they had done in Oslo outside my bedroom window one year earlier. They sometimes also managed to wake me up again by repeating the same technique later in the night, although this was not terribly effective. To compensate, they would occasionally use the roof instead to drop heavy objects onto my flat, but in general the police are reluctant to use roofs in these operations. They prefer to be invisible from the general public when they conduct the dirtiest parts of their harassment programme.

(<https://web.archive.org/web/20160922100611/https://policestalking.files.wordpress.com/2012/10/resenburgh3.jpg>).
Courtyard in Maasdam used by Dutch police to harass me, February-July, 2012

Apparently unhappy with the results achieved in this way, another escalation by Dutch police ensued in June. This is the part of the operation against me that I am most reluctant to describe, because, frankly, I wouldn't have believed it myself if someone had tried to convince me about it half a year ago. It's certainly a tall order to go directly from writing about police methods that few have even heard about to describing torture methods that in the eyes of many verge on sci-fi. I expect few people will be convinced after a first read. But I want to make sure that this particular aspect of the operation against me is on the record, because it is the most inhumane of all the elements involved in my case. Consider the possibility that important findings aren't always recognisable as such at first sight. Victims of torture are often not vindicated until long after the crimes have taken place. I have a troubling suspicion that what I am being exposed to will be used more frequently against enemies of the state in the future, not least since I have recently been able to connect it to general trends in the development of non-lethal weapons by law enforcement agencies in the United States and elsewhere.

So, one morning in Maasdam in June this year, I realised something had changed. Instead of the usual roars of car engines from the garage far down below, there were vibrations in my bed. I thought it was accidental or just some kind of weird hallucination on my part, but I got more worried when it resumed the next night when I went to sleep. I then tried to move my bed to different parts of the house, but to no avail. I changed from one bed to another. No luck. Later, the same kind of vibration appeared in the floors when I sat down to work at the computer.

I then thought I had found a solution by evacuating the flat. But I gradually realised the same vibrations could be reproduced, with different degrees of success, in other houses as well. It even worked outdoors, though with far less impact. The main limitation seemed to be my physical movements. The vibrations did not affect me when I moved a lot around, nor did they seem to produce any appreciable effect in trains or buses.

Many will doubtless say my story is a case of full-blown paranoia. Two counter-arguments have been important to myself in the process of ruling out hallucinations. Firstly, the waves were sufficiently strong that a water in a bottle placed in my bed began making waves, so I was able to record it on camera. Probably not enough proof to win a court case, but sufficient to convince myself that I was not mad. Secondly, from the day they began the new regime, my tormentors suddenly stopped making noise with cars in the garage at night. Would it not be remarkable that they should stop so suddenly after having performed the same kind of nightly ritual in the garage for several months?

I'll first try to describe this latest phenomenon in more detail, and then link it to known advances in unconventional "crowd control" technologies over the past decade, including controversial directed energy weapons that have been spearheaded by the United States.

(<https://web.archive.org/web/20160922100611/https://policestalking.files.wordpress.com/2012/10/nlw.jpg>)

The device they are using is best described as a low-intensity Taser or an electronic, wireless goad stick. It can produce throbbing, pulsating vibrations (typically 4-5 per second) whenever my body touches surfaces, including when I stand, sit or lie down. It can be used at great distance (probably more than 500 meters) and continuously for several hours. It seems to have its greatest effect when delivered from a room straight above me. In hotels, the police always insist that they get a room on top of where I am staying. In fact, since I began travelling again in July, they have consistently been in the room above me almost every single night. But the device does not depend on such proximity in order to work. It can work indoors without any kind of technical preparations, even if I do a walk-in hotel booking directly at the reception. In this kind of situation no one will have been able to visit my assigned room in advance for technical preparations, and yet only minutes after I have entered the device will work to some extent.

When the device is used from close range, it is often accompanied by noises of metal and material expansion in the building structure (similar to what some buildings produce when exposed to extreme sunlight). The primary limitation in the reach of the device seems to occur when I am on the move. Once I stop moving around, it usually takes at least 15 to 20 seconds before the device becomes effective again. Back in the Netherlands, whenever I sat in a train, my tormentors seemed to be able to operate the device when the train was standing still at stations, but it appeared to lose its grip once the train sped out of the station.

The vibrating sensation itself is not particularly dramatic, perhaps not more than the vibration one can sometimes feel in the floor when standing in front of a sink with water running at maximum power. The effect on the body ranges from mild to severe. There is always limited irritation from the constant vibrations when the device is on. There is sometimes visible static electricity in body hairs and a feeling of mild electrocution (similar to electrodes used in muscle therapy), often with a tingling and prickly sensation in the legs. And there are occasional straightforward electrical shocks and jolts which produce pain and involuntary muscle spasms. The vibrations target primarily the legs and the lower abdomen, although involuntary muscle contractions sometimes reach further up.

Because of two chronic health problems, the physical effect of the mistreatment is worse than the irritation itself. I have both ulcerative colitis (inflammatory bowel disease) and a chronic fissure, the latter being the result of dehydration and concomitant constipation I suffered after severe sleep deprivation resulting from police harassment in Oslo in February 2011. Both those chronic conditions are aggravated by high muscle tension in the abdominal region. Another effect of the police's device is numbness in the legs. Lately I have had more persistent cramps in the legs, as well as flank pain and cramps affecting the bowels. These are of course extremely general symptoms, unlikely to be of much help in any medical workup. But if something happens to me, assume foul play. It is not PhDs in medicine that are operating these devices, and since the devices are clearly unconventional, it means I have the questionable privilege of being on the cutting edge of their "researches", long before any risks relating to long term health issues have been determined by scientists. The fact that different torturers use different force levels indicate that there is no standardised parameters for operating the device. Since June, they have used the device for hours every single day and always at night.

Given the remarkable precision of the device and their ability to use it even in rooms where I am confident they have not pre-installed any kind of CCTV, I have considered the admittedly rather wild possibility that I may have been injected with some kind of substance that can be used as a beacon. I have had some dental work as well as injections for anal fissure problems done in recent years.

millimeter wave energy to repel individuals, Silent Guardian provides proven infrastructure and platform protection without causing injury.

"Raytheon's Silent Guardian systems are the best non-lethal solutions available today," said Mike Booen, vice president of Raytheon's Advanced Security and Directed Energy Systems product line. "Customers worldwide are interested in these systems to protect their high-value sites and critical assets."

Silent Guardian directs a focused beam of millimeter wave energy that travels at the speed of light producing an intolerable sensation that causes targeted individuals to flee or take cover. The sensation immediately ceases when an individual moves away from the beam or the operator discontinues engagement. Silent Guardian does not cause injury because of the shallow penetration depth of the millimeter wave and the safety features built into the system.

Download Image

Click to View

Copyright © 2006-2012 Raytheon Company

(<https://web.archive.org/web/20160922100611/https://policestalking.files.wordpress.com/2012/10/raytheon.jpg>).

I assume the vibrating phenomenon can be of electro-magnetic origin. So far, I have not had the possibility to experiment with electro-magnetic meters and Faraday cages in order to provide technically relevant observations. Generally speaking, though, most of what I have experienced is consonant with developments in so-called non-lethal weapons technology in general and directed energy weapons in particular. Conceptually, there appears to be a particularly close link to a device known as the Silent Guardian, developed by the Raytheon company in the USA over the past decade as a commercial and portable variant of "active denial systems" used by the US army. In particular, there is a close fit with the basic "prod" principle used for these weapons: The objective is to chase the target around through the infliction of moderate pain in the upper layers of the skin with the intention to force them to flee rather than to kill or cause permanent damage. These weapons are openly promoted by the US government, with the proud assertion that they do not discriminate with reference to sex, gender or race trumpeted as a sign of their supremely democratic and humane virtues at the Non-Lethal Weapons Programme website.

7. PERFORMING ORGANIZATION NAME(S) AND ADDRESS(ES) University of Nevada, Reno Sponsored Projects, Mail Stop 325 204 Ross Hall Reno, NV 89557-0240	8. PERFORMING ORGANIZATION REPORT NUMBER
9. SPONSORING/MONITORING AGENCY NAME(S) AND ADDRESS(ES) USAF/AFRL Air Force Office of Scientific Research 875 North Randolph Street, Room 3112 Arlington, VA 22203	AFRL-SR-AR-TR-07-0292
12. DISTRIBUTION/AVAILABILITY STATEMENT Unlimited Distribution Statement A: unlimited
13. SUPPLEMENTARY NOTES
14. ABSTRACT The overall goal of the research is to lay the foundation for developing non-lethal stunning/immobilizing weapons based on radiofrequency (RF)/microwave (MW) radiation. Our approach is to identify RF/MW parameters that can selectively, and without producing heating of tissue, alter processes underlying neurotransmitter release and contraction of skeletal muscle. Major accomplishments included 1) completing the design.

(<https://web.archive.org/web/20160922100611/https://policestalking.files.wordpress.com/2012/10/chatterjeecraviso2007c.jpg>)

At the same time, some of the capabilities of the device used against me, including the ability to penetrate thick building walls with considerable precision, indicate a more advanced device than the handheld directed energy weapons described in the literature so far (which are based on millimeter waves). Another difference with the Silent Guardian and active denial systems generally concerns the level of heat. In the case of those weapons, intense heat is normally described as part of the pain experienced by the victim. In my case, the thermal effects are not as prominent. This makes me think about an area of non-lethal weapons technology about which there is very little information in the public domain: Experiments to use microwave power to produce non-thermal effects, including muscular impact. Although detailed information is lacking, it is clear that for almost a decade, academics in the United States have conducted research on these areas for the specific purpose of creating a microwave weapon for the US army that can control muscular contractions at far longer ranges than the Taser. Among the researchers who stand out for their involvement in this project are Indira Chatterjee and Gale Craviso from an interdisciplinary group in Nevada, who have consistently received funding for such Mengele-evoking projects from the Pentagon over the last 10 years (and who have consistently trumpeted the alleged contributions to medical science of those projects).

(<https://web.archive.org/web/20160922100611/https://policestalking.files.wordpress.com/2012/10/chatterjeecraviso.jpg>)

Chatterjee & Craviso: Leading scientists from Nevada involved in non-lethal weapons development

In this context, it makes sense to add some remarks on a separate genre on the internet that I came across around a year ago: “Targeted individuals” and gangstalking. The victims described in those accounts show some similarities to the stalking that I am describing. To be honest, I have been sceptical about much (if not all) of what is written about targeted individuals. Most accounts are anonymous. Few targets seem prepared to admit an existing conflict with the police or the government, and many resort to general conspiracy theories instead. Targeted individuals websites tend to be of the old, static category, and it is often difficult to catch a glimpse of the individuals behind them. My preliminary conclusion has been that “targeted individuals” as a genre is probably a combination of many things – including real victims of police stalking who may feel attracted by the master narrative offered by the gangstalking genre, but also general internet hype as well as people seeking to discredit the experiences of real stalking victims.

Previously I always dismissed right out of hand gangstalking accounts whenever they entered into the territory of “microwave torture”. Then, this latest development in my own situation, where I come across something which I myself emphatically ridiculed only a year ago! The important point here is to point out that directed energy weapons is not sci-fi. In particular, the works of Neil Davison (<https://web.archive.org/web/20160922100611/http://nonlethalweaponsbook.com/>) of the International Red Cross stand out as a prudent and objective description of this latest and worrisome turn in unconventional weapon technologies. Using among other things research proposals as a source, Davison demonstrates how law enforcement agencies, in particular in the United States, cooperate closely with the weapons industry precisely in the search for prod-like weapons for crowd control purposes. With respect to the targeted individuals genre and some of its more fantastic claims, could it be that interested parties have deliberately added some sci-fi elements like UFOs and mind control to the electronic harassment genre precisely in order to discredit real victims? The only thing we know for sure is that directed energy weapons are real, and we can safely assume that only a fraction of the relevant information is in the public domain.

Finally, there are some interesting international dimensions to the use of the prod-like device in my case. It began in the Netherlands, where the police may already have some kind of active denial capability on the US pattern. The device was subsequently used in Taiwan, probably with the consent of the local police since it was used even in sensitive areas like airports, even a short time after I had landed. The greatest shock to me was that the device is still being used where I am now, in a country in the Asia-Pacific with excellent democratic credentials and where the people have resisted several attempted US impositions, notably in the fields of military cooperation and nuclear technology. At first I speculated that the device was being operated by foreign police officers without the knowledge of the local police. However, given the extensive use of it, I am increasingly convinced that local authorities know about it and have approved it. It would mean yet another case of “NYPDfication” whereby inhumane American technology and policing methods intended to instill fear are spreading globally with zero accountability and democratic oversight.

One thing I can't help wondering about is what would happen if I travelled to a non-democratic country like China. A quick look at descriptions of what Chinese dissidents are going through make it clear that police stalking goes on there too. But the methods Chinese authorities use seem stone age compared to what is being used against me. The Chinese police would probably love to get their hands on this new technology! But would the Dutch and Norwegians and any others cooperating with them be prepared to go along with that?

For now, I am doing my best to survive. At first I thought the device was so scandalously illegal that it was just some kind of nuclear option the Dutch were using to finally evict me from the country and get rid of me once and for all. Accordingly, during my last days in the Netherlands, I would sometimes stay up at night instead of going to bed, just focusing on getting practical things done ahead of my departure. However, when they continued to use the device abroad, I realised that it was not realistic to get away from it anyway. I was doing more harm to myself by cutting down on sleep. If the device permanently damages me or kills me, at least I will have done my part by informing about it. I see that as a duty. Given the effectiveness of the device, I have a sorry feeling this an instrument enemies of the state across the globe will learn more about it in the future.

If you haven't read the background to my case, you can find more information via this link (<https://web.archive.org/web/20160922100611/https://policestalking.wordpress.com/2012/09/19/how-the-norwegian-government-brought-an-end-to-my-iraq-research/>).

About these ads
(<https://web.archive.org/web/20160922100611/https://wordpress.com/about-these-ads/>)

PUBLISHED: October 2, 2012 (2012-10-02T12:38:39+0000)

FILED UNDER: Uncategorized

18 Comments to “The Secret Torture Dimension of Police Stalking: From Noise Harassment to Directed Energy Weapons”

Chris A. Borg says:

October 2, 2012 at 3:41 pm

At least the British military has been doing research in the field of microwave warfare since the 1950's.... They have developed rather sophisticated weaponry, and they have no problems targeting individuals with this technology. They can even choose from a wide array of “illnesses” they want to give you, ranging from the sort of pains/sensations you speak about to psychiatric illnesses, sexual aggression, cancer and other severe illnesses. There is a man called Barrie Trower, who is an engineer educated by the British military in the field of microwave warfare. Did you know that the microwave ovens were prohibited in some countries when they introduced this “system”? Russia was one of these countries, and the reason is of course that they knew how dangerous this radiation is, and the fact that it kills all nourishment in food prepared in such ovens. In fact, if you want to kill someone, you can feed them only “microwaved” meals, and they will soon die, and no one can prove this...

Error loading player:
HTML5 player not found

I'd like to thank you for this bravery you show by exposing your case like this, and I sincerely hope you this will end soon...

Reidar Visser says:

October 2, 2012 at 4:43 pm

Chris, thanks. Interesting stuff. I notice that Mr. Trower has a fair share of critics, but my guess is the truth is somewhere in the middle. That's where I found Neil Davidson's book so helpful.

I find it particularly important to stress that there is an official, publicly acknowledged US government programme to develop microwave capabilities with physical and psychological effects on targets. All too often, the debate on these subject seems polarized between those who dismiss everything as sci-fi and those who perhaps exaggerate the destructive power of microwaves in appliances where they after all appear to have a reasonably good record, including kitchen microwave ovens.

Lissakrhumanelife says:

October 3, 2012 at 8:10 am

Reblogged this on USA COINTELPRO VICTIM OF THE PATRIOT ACT.

Jenny says:

October 3, 2012 at 2:46 pm

Thank you so much for writing this. I am going through something very similar in Alb. NM, U.S. I want to make very clear that I have NEVER published anything I have written, and the ONLY way the police should know my political philosophy is through extensive illegal surveillance of my online activities/statements, and hacking into my writings- which are all about my beliefs in the innate rights of every human to not have to stand under another human who was born of equal standing, and merit, and has no right to impose themselves as an authority over others- unless it is their own children. Otherwise NO adult needs to answer/obey another adult- and the ONLY law people have to abide by is the moral law that is also innate to every human- and understood as a conscience- this is the mechanism that tells people the difference between good or bad choices- and this innate understanding of morality is based on how our choices affect ourselves/others- in other words it is OUR responsibility (not law enforcement) to make the right choices- and for as long as they convince us that THEY are the purveyors/creators of morality- they will say whatever they do is 'moral' and whatever we do is 'immoral'. This of course is not true, and they are the most immoral people there are- but they will excuse everything they do if we buy into the lie that they are the moral people- rather than the people destroying our innately understood morality (real morality says that it is our obligation to steal from the rich to feed the poor, for instance, because no person is so great they deserve more than their share of earths resources while others have nothing, and are starving- BUT the morality that law enforcement wants us to believe in is that it is completely moral to allow most people to starve, while a few people hoard enough food/money/resources to feed/clothe/shelter EVERY person on earth- and that what is moral is protecting the people who have taken vastly more than their fair share, and protecting their crimes against humanity- SORRY law enforcement I am not biting- you are the most corrupt/immoral/evil people walking this planet- and you will excuse every last thing you do to innocent people, and your fellow humans- ONE thing you overlooked though, is the law of Karma, that exists beyond us to manifest realities which teach each person the things that they must face- over many lifetimes- before we are ready to evolve to higher states of consciousness and creative power in the universe- you people will be doomed to what has been known as the 'underworld' or 'hell' (aka Earth- where our creative abilities are severely limited/frustrated, our spiritual selves are forgotten, unless sought directly, and our choices, and energy are closely monitored by forces beyond our comprehension). So, in short, my message to the people doing these things to us: Good luck- in the long run you will pay yourself for every transgression you made against another soul- so I wouldn't be so proud of making such stupid, selfish, and unethical choices.

BUT ANYWAYS BACK TO THE POINT OF HOW I AM BEING UNLAWFULLY WATCHED WITHOUT MY CONSENT/PERMISSION, AND WITHOUT REASONABLE CAUSE.

What I have been experiencing is similar to you. I started having health complications after I went to planned parenthood when I was 24- about a year and a half ago. I did not trust the man who examined me, and he had a tattoo (looked like a prison tattoo) with what seemed like an illuminati symbol on his forearm. When he examined me he was inappropriate, took far too long, was looking at me in a weird/creepy way, and made me feel like I was being molested. After that experience I have sporadically suffered strange pains in my lower abdomen area, and what feels like my ovaries, and my periods changed and were much more painful, also I immediately began looking sick- with dark circles under my eyes which I have never had before, and they have been there ever since. I have not gone to a doctor to figure out what they have given me, because I no longer trust them, and I would rather try to heal myself. I feel they could have given me anything- but I refuse to allow them to intimidate me, I am not afraid of death, because I have lived as a good person, done my best to make the right choices, have not transgressed the rights of others, and tried as much as possible to better the world around me- the people who are doing this to me can not say these same things- they should be the ones afraid of death- and afraid of the ultimate consequences to their worldly choices. But anyway this is the health aspect of what I have experienced- and I believe it is related to the other things I have experienced.

ALSO

I am living with the same type of surveillance/intimidation tactics. I am ALWAYS followed by different police vehicles marked/unmarked. I take weird routes through neighborhood streets to see if in fact people are following me, and indeed I always find that yes, multiple cars will turn behind me on my weird routes, a few will go straight, and then when I turn on a more busy street, the cars will meet up again behind me. I have pulled over, and watched them, and they are always speaking on phones/devices and they are ALWAYS holding the phones the same way- a foot or so down from their ear. When I look at them they turn away, and keep their phone pulled away from their ear, but continue speaking (to who?). These cars(a lot of trucks too) follow me all the time- everywhere I go- and the same cars will show up again and again- literally- as though they are trying to let me know they are following me. When I walk outside of my house the same cars will drive by at the exact moment I walk to my car (to try to intimidate me, I assume)- how do they know that I am leaving my house at that moment?- unless they are watching me in a way that is SEVERELY infringing my rights to privacy? Also wherever I go police helicopters are circling overhead- which seems insanely excessive, but for some reason, yes, police helicopters are ALWAYS loudly circling overhead (this could be a coincidence, but what are they always looking for then? And why are they always circling around everywhere I seem to go? And why would they just circle around the vicinity I am in- instead of go wherever they plan to go?)

Also many times I have come home to find my backdoor wide open, even though I locked it. We recently moved, and the house next door to us was for sale/empty for two full years before we moved in because it was overpriced, and my landlord said no one would be interested in buying it because of how overpriced it was- so I told my husband: "Now that we move in- I bet you anything someone will move in to that place- because it offers the perfect view of our backyard, and bedroom windows." And sure enough, a week or two after we moved in a beige truck started parking there every day, and night- though they must have heard what I said- because the for sale sign has been left up- despite this man apparently living there now. One of the days I came home using a strange route, I happened upon the man who was walking (for some reason) from the truck parked next door- to the house directly across the street, where a woman lives with her husband- this is where it gets weird- My neighbors are somehow being commissioned to also spy on me. Every time I drive up to my driveway at least two neighbors will drive up immediately afterword- to the point that it is obviously not a coincidence- and happens at all times. Also when we leave the house at least one neighbor will be leaving at the same time- usually our neighbors directly next to us- and they always show up right after we get home- even though we will come home at completely different hours. The other day, for instance, we got home and stayed in the car for a bit to see who would drive up right after us, and we saw the woman across the street come over to the house next to us, and begin talking to the man in the beige truck-who for some reason was sitting in his truck apparently doing nothing- so we walked inside and I thought maybe the truck would leave, and was getting ready to leave- but when I went outside I found that the truck hadn't left- so why did the woman go up to talk to him right after we drove up, and why was he in his truck if he wasn't leaving? I have also seen cars in the middle of the night parked directly in front of my house, and when I looked out the window they slowly drove away. ALSO I am worried that they may be spying on people through newer/modern light bulbs, because every time I walk into my bathroom- my light bulbs will make a clicking sound- but I still do not know for sure if this is part of it- if it is- these people are ten times more brazenly disgusting than we realize. All this sounds so crazy that I have not known what to do- and have felt that no one would listen to me. So if something happens to me (Jenny Cara McCafferty- Born Oct.20.1986 in Santa Fe, NM) It is because the people who have been stalking me finally did something. Thank you again for writing this article, and please do not give up- EVERYONE needs to know what they are doing to people like us- it could be them next.

Max says:

October 3, 2012 at 3:23 pm

You mentioned that you considered someone may have injected you with some kind of substance that could act as a beacon. That may well be true but a few other possibilities.

Just guessing here but:

1. Are they using satellite technology to spy on you from above? It's no secret that they can focus on small objects in fine detail and with infra-red or some other wave length I'm sure it would be fairly easy to peer through your roof and upper floors once they had the coordinates of your room.
2. If they got a sample of your DNA through your skin or hair then perhaps they could somehow lock into the frequency your DNA gives off? Apparently DNA does give off a frequency unique to each person.
3. Somehow tracking you through the heat signature your body gives off?
4. When you leave your house they might follow your movements through chips in the credit card/cash card etc you carry.
5. Did you have any dental work done in recent years (ie; implanted beacon)?

The above is probably not much help but if it triggers some ideas then it might. Even if you did know the way they track you, I don't know how you could prevent it in most cases. I've also had mild harassment in the past – although nothing like in your case – and I'd considered the above. God bless and I hope it ends for you successfully and soon.

Max

Mohammed says:

October 3, 2012 at 4:53 pm

Dear Reidar:

Your safety and well-being is in my heart and prayers. I grow more infuriated with the more details you have posted regarding this barbaric behavior on the part of your thuggish stalkers (it would be a disgrace to call them police).

But allow me to push back on your previous reply to me. It is rather irrelevant whether the police acknowledge a valid criminal complaint against you. The point is that you have described in great detail gross violations of your civil and human rights. You are entitled to proceed to a judge to put a stop to this. Who cares what the police say? If the judge agrees that your rights are violated then he or she can order them to put a halt to this. I am not an expert in law, but if you were in the USA, you would certainly have such a recourse. I can't speculate about other countries you have resided in. You sound very passive about all of this, and that is very uncharacteristic of you. Your responses have avoided answering my direct questions by repeatedly stating the same point regarding the police not admitting to having a criminal case against you. That is not my question. The question is have you tried to go to a judge to put a stop to their behavior? If not, why not. This question applies not just to Norway, but other countries. You need not be a citizen of the USA to be entitled to rights to petition a court, same goes for most European countries.

There is something in all this that sounds like a big piece of the puzzle is missing.

Regards

M

rachel says:

October 3, 2012 at 7:40 pm

I used to ignore all those websites going on about "morgellons" because it was too creepy to understand, or want to understand. But after two years of vibrations, severe asthma (sudden adult onset) and other problems, I started getting the wierd sores myself.

You say you think to botox doctor may have put something in you (that may be electrically conductive?). I had an incident just before I started having very strange symptoms with a mystery “quiet guy” who turned out to be a total psychopath. He said he made “noise music” which was basically just a lot of sound effects that sounded horrible. It’s a long story, but the point I want to make is simple. There are creepy stalkers. There are strange little microscopic fiber things in our bodies, which you may or may not see at all, but they are there.

Since I started removing (chelating) heavy metals from my body, the vibrations have stopped, my focus has returned and the morgellons sores have become much less. Also, putting my internet modem and router in a faraway cage (tin-foiled grounded box) made the strange sounds I was hearing go away. Cloudy days are the worst, still, because the grey and brown poo clouds are literally electromagnetic smog. There are metals dumped in the air everyday all over the planet and we breathe them in. This makes us very conductive. Chelate the metal and you’re less conductive. Powerful air cleaners are important as well. You can’t remove a toxin from your body if you are constantly exposed to the toxin.

I very much recommend clifford carnicoms website (do a search) and “morgellons exposed” website. You don’t have the sores, but that doesn’t mean you don’t have it inside you. Get any metal fillings out of your mouth and start chelating. There are ways to slowly eliminate the conductivity in your body and therefor the ability of the “torturers” becomes more and more futile.

Please take me seriously. I promise these things will help if you do them.

Reidar Visser says:

October 3, 2012 at 10:13 pm

Mohammed, thanks for your suggestion about the courts. In the country where I have been most of the time (the Netherlands) it’s not like you can walk right up to a judge and ask him for a hearing. The separation of power between the executive and the judiciary is limited in the Netherlands and almost all cases come to the prosecution via the police. If you want to challenge the police themselves you must present evidence to a judge before he will even consider having a hearing, and most likely he will dismiss it.

Unfortunately, similar conditions prevail in many Western countries.

Tamara D. says:

October 4, 2012 at 12:06 am

There’s various research that has shown that microwaved food, even water, is changed in such a way as to be toxic to the body. Microwave ovens are not safe. The toxins have an effect over time on people’s health and watering plants with microwaved water will kill them over time as well.

Reidar Visser says:

October 4, 2012 at 12:05 pm

Max, thanks for your thoughts and apologies for the belated publication of them – the spam filter had eaten your comment. Anyway, I’ll keep most of those scenarios open. I can confirm I had dental work (root filling) in 2010 at a time when the police were not actively harassing me, though they were probably tailing me. I have no reason to believe any of the dentists involved would compromise their professional commitment.

As for metal/credit cards/phone etc., we can rule that out. The electronic device can work even when I have no clothes on. Though it is of course possible that they can narrow down the area where I am because I carry with me stuff that is always near me. Have tried to pick out batteries of phones and laptops and other devices that might be thought of as a potential beacon for them, but no results.

Max says:

October 4, 2012 at 12:44 pm

Reidar,

One more thing. The following is an article from March 2009 that might give you a bit more insight. I read it some time ago but there are similarities to your case as I recall.

The Silent Massacre, Part 1

Law Enforcement Complicity in Electronic Torture & Mind Control in America

This is the first part of a six part essay by Nicholas Kirkland which overviews the means and methods employed by governments and some powerful organizations, to psychotronically harass and torture innocent people; and the complicity of law enforcement in that endeavor. This essay is one of the more thorough and cogent explanations that I’ve read to date that reveals all aspects of psychotronic assault and its impact upon the victim. There is an urgent need for science professionals of decency and morality to step up to the plate and not only assist victims of psychotronic torture to unmask this activity, but to help discover countermeasures to thwart and countervene these assaults. There is no greater “crime against humanity” than psychotronic torture and harassment. It must be stopped and its perpetrators brought to justice. ...

Ken Adachi

<http://educate-yourself.org/mc/kirklandsilventmasacre1part14mar09.shtml>

Best,

Max

Thinker Belle says:

October 9, 2012 at 5:39 pm

Dear Jenny:

You neighbor's are not spying on you. If you see police helicopters wherever you go, odds are there has been an armed robbery nearby and they are searching for the culprit. However, seeing strange cars in the area at night might be a cause for concern.

Some police may stalk, but not for the governments agenda of using psychotropic weapons on anyone. Typically, it is to gain cash for their services. I have had one do something weird to my radio-announcing a news brief about some banker from a puny little town was involved in a car crash (helicopters overhead, hit a light pole, the whole nine yards as if this were some bank robber that crashed making a get away). The entire brief was so weird that I popped in a CD. This guy was driving beside me at the time.

I felt this was for my benefit as I had captured one on film once and called the police. They did nothing. He came from the state south of me and an Iranian was also involved in the scam at the time.

The credit card tracking misinformation is to get you to carry cash so you can be robbed. The “mind control” is a technique used to line their wallets as they cash in on catching criminals. If you are near military, this is their procedure as they think they are much smarter than anyone else.

I have endured the stalking for years and know where it began and why they do it. My state is comprised of mainly military and it is their biggest industry. The police are recruited from there and most think the same. They operate like biker gangs in that they cover for each other, share each others wives/girlfriends, and expect other males that have been in the service to do the same.

One day I stumbled upon a website located in my state. Then I began to realize why every time I was visiting my mother I would be surrounded by cars from my state. Mind you, this is 1000 miles away! I had never seen so many from my state before. These people operate a blog that deals with this stuff and it is my belief they are robbing people, smuggling drugs, and trying to collect fees for protection. These people may present themselves as religious;they are not.

After reading about an upcoming election, I am certain it will only worsen in my state. The county in which I live has a military base and they select officers from it. Someone running against another is going to employ these “undercover” operatives-robbing for Jesus- for their own use, too (They go to the same type church). These people from this area have historically ran the state for their own use and will continue to do so. (They've never had a police force, but continue to get more into jobs where they do not belong via a it's who you know program, not what you know)They have their own buddy system which enables to cash in on stalking, breaking and entering, death threats, threatening family members, killing pets, threatening neighbors, etc. for the sole purpose of cashing in monetarily, or at least for the purpose of getting others to think they are not inept. (A man who counsels troubled youth said most of the kids he gets are from that area). However, I know of one that isn't from there. Perhaps he got acquainted some other way or is from there and moved elsewhere.

Yes they are using their buddies off the base to keep their stronghold as I often see deputies right after a stalking and I know these two entities are already working hand in hand. They wish everyone would report back to them exclusively.

They terrorize the citizens, mainly women but some men, as they think and feel it will make them better people. With them are the up and coming journalist of the future. In fact, I had one photograph me not long before they started parking their car across the Interstate off ramp and blocking with the three car pileup routine...took a while to figure out what was going on.

The goal is to see which denomination is the strongest...Christianity or Muslims. The last time the Muslims won.

As far as the dental implant suggestions by other commenters-that's a source of paranoia they use to investigate and intimidate doctors. They do that here, too. They will normally threaten any physician their target visits as that person was only ever targeted as a means to have someone to hide behind as these people are blatant cowards that want everyone to think that capturing the Russian mafia should rank right up there with bringing down the Mexican drug lords. These are throwbacks from yesteryear.

They announce their intentions before hand. They've taken cigars out of my neighbor's vehicle and left them on my water main. Then they've entered the home of someone who had already once been a victim of the "teaching methods" that had lost his wife to cancer and been put in a coma by someone who felt his color of skin wasn't appropriate. He moved out of the area as I had. Same crap. They tailed his meter reader to the library and stole his truck.

So, when the scorched earth campaign began, they didn't have the resources or the personnel to do the job-as usual. Most of my state and the one from which the bank robber came was torched. Why? Because a woman had moved back into the area that had once worked for their fire dept years ago. She/husband was from Vegas and what time was more appropriate to burn the state to the ground than to have a woman to blame for being a mafia kingpin.

No one to blame there because if we are all equal, she could have been a mafia kingpin.

I also read where a man shot dead an Iranian in a parking lot. He had come at him with a knife. Gonna be a doctor one day. Wouldn't you like to be carved on in a parking lot. Boom! No more. The shooter was arrested for murder and had a troubled past. It was like two ships passing in the night. He's in jail and the other in a grave. Bittersweet justice!

Do not for one minute think your neighbors are interested in what you are doing. They aren't.

Benjamin Simon Ciney says:

October 19, 2012 at 4:20 am

<http://gangstalkingbelgium.net/>

Djamila BOUTEBBA says:

November 10, 2012 at 1:39 pm

I used to believe these things only happened to me but I was wrong. I know now that a huge amount of people are going through the same hell as the one I was subjected to by the british gestapo. Every day as soon as I open the front or back door a cacophony of sirens is unleashed. These shrieking noises would follow me anywhere and everywhere. They would follow me to the park, the market, sonic sirens screaming, to banks, supermarkets, clinics and hospitals. While I am speaking to my doctor, solicitor, anyone at all, they would be parked sometimes in convoys outside the door or the windows. Impossible to enjoy the garden or even a game of indoor bowling. They would send an army or builders to cut wood, bang things together, pretend to be repairing some hole in roofs nearby and banging scaffolding metal poles with utmost violence. Noises nuisances, repeated piano tunes, doors being slammed in hotels and especially by my neighbours their agents, WHO STOMP THEIR FEET, scream, whose houses they have refurbished, noise nuisances round the clock as soon as I go in and who are well paid to carry out the tortures, vans, cars, clothes, holidays AS REWARD for harrassing me and provoking me relentlessly, robbing me and committing unending crimes like entering my home, stealing writings and private documents, socks, leaving 1 out of 2, underwear, messing up and scratching furniture, going out at the same time as me and attempting to run me over. On top of this they have gagged all solicitors and the press. pure evil.

Robert Malcolm says:

December 25, 2012 at 7:19 am

Your not alone Reidar. My name is Robert Steve Malcolm and I live at 449 VanCortlandt Park Avenue, Yonkers, New York 10705 in the United States. I was falsely accused by the Yonkers Police Department in 1999. I was 19 years old at the time of being falsely accused. It was not your typical police case. This was the type of cases where: 1) the police don't tell you what your being accused of, 2) they spread the false charges all across the city so everyone can harass you, and then 3) they hope you do something foolish and physically assault them or someone who is harassing you so they can lock you up for a crime you did not commit. It is a conspiracy case where they cops felt they can get away with it because I was a 19 year old black man with no money and no political influence to fight the system.

Now, before I begin my story, I have to point out the fact that in the United States, racism is alive and well. Black sport athletes, musicians, and celebrities gets treated much better by white people than blacks who are not sport athletes, musicians, and celebrities. Yonkers, New York is especially racist toward black men.

In December of 1998, I was in college at Westchester Business Institue in White Plains at the time. (The college has since it changed its name to The College of Westchester probably because of the conspiracy they took part in against me). Anyway, one night I was watching News 12 on Cablevision and I saw a police sketched that look like to be me wearing a winter cap and sunglasses because that is what I always wore when I went outside in the winter. I didn't believe it at first because I never to this day had broken the law or been to jail; so I dismiss it as paranoia. Also, News 12 didn't say who the person in the sketched was; just that the cops were looking for this person because he is being accused of rape. When I heard that, I thought this person couldn't be me because I was a virgin then and still a virgin to this day because of this conspiracy.

So in January of 1999, I was going to school as usual, and then around the second or third week in January the students in the school would start coughing at me. At first, I thought it had to be a flu going around or something because there was no reason for anyone to cough at me. I had no enemies at the school. Unfortunately for me, when February came around, the students in the school were coughing at me nonstop; even some teachers started to cough at me. That is when I knew somebody is falsely accusing me of something. The coughing went in to the month of March, and by this time, people on the bus I took to and from college started to cough at me too. Even when I went into stores around my house people would just start coughing at me. By this time, I knew the cops were up to something. I was just 19 at the time so I thought that if I just ignored it, it would just go away and the cops realized that I am innocent. Unfortunately, by April, everybody in Yonkers was harassing me. Cars would honk their horns wherever I went. Cops started to show up more frequently around me. I would see more police cars drive by me when I went to the store. It was a full-blown conspiracy in action. All races were harassing me by this time. I started to wonder if I was a white man would this ever happen to me. I never heard of cases like this happening to me.

I was losing my mind; and then one day in April, a black student told me that the FBI was investigating me. By then, I learned that racism was playing a part. I was so upset at the time I left college. I no longer focus on homework while being harassed and falsely accused. Besides, if everyone was falsely accusing and harassing me, there was no way anyone would hire me so it made sense at the time to leave school. Also, when I talked to the people in charge of the college, they just said I was just imagining things. And then one of them had the nerve to cough at me when I was leaving the room. That is when I knew the higher ups in the school were in on this. The cops spread all their false bullshit across Westchester County.

What scared me even more is how did everyone know what I looked like. Everyone on the bus, everyone at the stores I went to, everyone in school knew to cough at me. That is when I realized that the FBI was somehow spreading my face and my name all around Westchester to scare people into thinking I am a criminal and to get citizens to get me agitated so they can charge me with something then get me to falsely confess to crimes I did not commit.

After I left college I went to various police stations in Yonkers and in White Plains to find out why they were falsely accusing me. They said they didn't know what I was talking about and went on to cough at me when I walked away. I called the cops to find out what was going on but they all acted stupid like they didn't know what I was talking about. By this time I was 100% convinced that they didn't care about my innocence. The only thing they cared about was getting me to do something stupid so they would falsely accuse me.

I knew I was being set up. I was trying to figure out what could cause this frame up. Then it hit me.

You see, in high school (Sacred Heart High School in Yonkers), I was always the most picked on kid at my school; especially between freshmen and junior year. In my senior graduating class, there was only 4 black kids in my class including me. So you can see how tough it was for me getting picked on by everyone. Students from my senior and junior class would prank call my house constantly until I started confronting people in my class to get them to stop.

I did get along with some people throughout my time. I even got along very well with a white girl named Susan. Being a silly teenager at the time I wrote her a letter in December of 1998. We already graduated from Sacred Heart High School in June 1998 so I just wrote her a letter to see how she was doing. I told her I love her in the letter, which looking back I probably shouldn't have done that because with the police sketches of what look like me on News 12 Cablevision coming out about 10 days after I mailed the letter to Susan; I started putting two and two together. Somebody who didn't like the idea of a black male going out with a white female wanted to falsely accuse me of rape. But the thing is, me and Susan never had sex and the cops knew that. They knew I was a virgin but somebody wanted to lock me up for a crime I did not commit. They hope that I would do something stupid and hit someone and then officially charge me for a crime I did not commit. That is why I stated earlier that racism is alive and well in the United States. If I was a white man, I doubt this would ever happen for writing a letter. If I wrote anything bad in the letter I would have already been locked up and charged with harassment. But the fact is I only wrote 1 letter to this day and it was a harmless letter. The cops know this but at the same time they didn't care. They wanted to bring me down bad for even talking to a white girl.

After this I fell into a depression knowing that nobody cared about my innocence and that I didn't have the money or political influence to expose this conspiracy. The cops would not feel sorry for me. From April 1999 to late 2001, the cops would drive by my house blasting their sirens. Cars would repeatedly honk their horns as they passed my house. I would hear over 20 car honks per hour. The people near my house would purposely set off their car alarm to harass me. To make matters worse, they used to be an old lady living at 451 VanCortlandt Park Avenue, which is right next door to my house. She suddenly move out of the house and a cop and his family would move next door. This is when I knew that the cops were setting up undercover surveillance to not only spy on me but to harass me. You see, I didn't knew they were cops at the time. And the cops were smart at the time. They but a black cop and his family next door so I wouldn't suspect he was a cop. Unfortunately, black on black racism is also alive and well in the United States. If you don't act hard like the majority of black men you get treated like an outsider. I wouldn't be describe as your typical black man. I love hockey which is mostly white and love rock music in addition to rap. The blacks in Yonkers don't consider me one of them so I am treated as fair game. Also, I am don't think the black females like the fact I like white women.

Anyway, the black family next door would constantly harass me. When I tried to watch tv down stairs cop's kids would come scream in the window to prevent me from concentrating on the tv. They came up with this because I would close the window and turn up the volume on the tv to prevent the car honking and police sirens from distracting me. So they used their kids to get right next to the window to piss me off. It became so bad, I just stayed upstairs to watch tv. During the summer it was tough even upstairs. My room is right next to their side of the house so they would just scream while I am watching tv to bother me. The cop's wife would also raise her voice to distract me. This would go on nonstop for months. I would learn from my mom that the person next door was a cop. This made me even madder.

When ever I tried to fall asleep before 2 am or so, their kids would scream just to wake me up. Then one day I realized the unthinkable happen, I found out the cops were using illegal technology to monitor where I was in the house. You see the kids would stop yelling downstairs in the window when I moved up stairs. I didn't catch on at first then I started to ask myself "how did they know I was upstairs watching tv?" I didn't turn on the volume loud enough to be heard outside when I was upstairs. Also, their was an event when a large parade float knock off the telephone and tv wires around May of 1999. Again, I didn't catch on at first because I was just 19, but when the kids knew where I was inside my house, plus add the fact that their father was a cop, I started to realized this was an all out conspiracy operation to mess with me. The true confirmation of the policing monitoring me occurred whenever I tried to masterbate or whenever I got horny. The mother and the daughter next door would just start scream in order to startle me and get me to stop. The son over there would even scream "he is jerking off". They wanted me to go over there and do something violent to them. But I couldn't because I knew the conspiracy was on and that nobody care about my innocence. Not the media nor the public.

Getting back to the media, I didn't see myself on the News 12 after that day in December of 1998, but some wierd things did started to happen to me regarding the news on the radio and a rap music station named Hot 97 (which actually helped me).

You see the cops even got the news radio station to mess with me by constantly saying Robert on the radio. It was any news event directly aimed at me, but every few minutes they were purposely saying a case that had the name Robert in it to mess with me. Since the cops wire my tv, phones, and using illegal technology to spy on me, they knew what I was doing when I was doing it. And one day I turned on Hot 97 on the radio to listen to some R&B and rap music, and the weirdest thing happen; the dj on the radio said that we need to take this time to tell a certain Robert to stop listening to our radio program. He said he knew I just turned on the station and to stop listen to it. This was a shocker to say the least, but it confirmed the fact that this was an all out conspiracy and the FBI had everyone in on it. Nobody cared about the fact that I am a virgin and that I am innocent. Nobody cared that I never been arrested and that I have never been to jail. Nobody cared that I had a clean criminal record. They just want me to go down for a crime I did not commit.

To Hot 97 defense, I am not sure they were totally against me, because to say what they did when I turned on to their station, they knew they were tipping me off. They also let me know that their was nothing I can do. So my depression got even worse.

The constant harassment by the public, the cops, and the cop next door went on heavily form 1999 to late 2001. When the September 9-11 occurred and the Twin Towers fell, the harassment started to disappear. The public stopped for the most part. By this time I can only assumed that they finally accepted the fact that I am innocent and a virgin and that the cops were setting me up. The cops continued to harassment; however, even using the dirty tactic of either having the fire fighters drive their sirens in front of my house almost ever hour and to stop me from sleeping at night.

By 2004 my depression went away and decided to join the army were went on to have a great life. I spent four and half years there and even went to Iraq for 8 months and Kuwait for a month. Since I was innocent and had a clean record, the government knew I was innocent so joining the army was no issue. By 2004, the only people harassing was the cops so I felt a bit better about that.

I hope that after I served my 4 years in the army the cops would leave me alone but I was wrong. When I came back in 2009 I found out the black cop next door was still there and the cops went right back to harassing me to this very day. That is why I am writing this hugh story to you to let you know what tactics the cops are doing to this very day and how heartless the cops can be. They used citizens as informants to spy and harass me. They are constantly using illegal technology to spy on me.

This year I caught the cops tracking me using my cell phone as a GPS tracking device. It appears they don't need a warrant in New York to get a phone company to track my whereabouts. I didn't had a cell phone back in 1999 being just a teenage and all, but I can afford one now. I knew the cops were undercover following me using my cell phone because I would catch undercover either using their cell phones to take pictures of me to inform everyone what I look like today and to let the other cops know when I left a building. Whenever I went to the gym, people (probably undercover cops) would start harassing me. They didn't at first, but I guess when they started tracking my cell phone, they knew on what days of the week I would go to the gym and then they would send cops over their to bother me. I would usually develop a pattern of going to the gym like Mondays and Thursday and then I would see the cops and they would start to talk trash and make fun of me. I would always have my headphones on at first, but one day my headphones stopped working and I overheard them talking about 1999 and when I was falsely accused. I knew right then and there they were trying to get me to start fighting so they can lock me up and falsely accuse me again. These cops are ruthless.

To be sure of the harassment, I one day left my cell phone at home and there was no one in the gym. This proved it was cops harassing me. Some days I would skip a day when I would normally go to the gym and then go to a day I would normally not go on, and sure enough, the gym was virtually empty. This is how they do it.

The cops were also going into a deli that I used to go to. I would start to see them more and more. Then I started to get sick from eating the ham sandwich I always order from the deli. Then one day I found a roach in the sandwich and never went back. I knew the cops were pressuring them to make me sick, probably even trying to kill me. At the gym, they started given me out of date Amped or Speedstack when I ask for them at the gym. I think they didn't think I would notice. Before I was getting sick from the deli (and possibly the gym as well) I didn't know what was causing it. I would suffer from severe bloating and constipation. I had to take a colon and internal cleansing system to get rid of the poison and bugs I found in my system. That is right bugs started coming out of my waste because the cops were having the deli and possibly the gym and the other places at ate to poison me. I hardly eat out anymore because of this. Thankfully, I made a full recover from the food poison attempt and it confirmed that the cops will try to poison you if they are having a hard time trying to get you to do something violent.

The harassment didn't stop there. Since I am currently in college, I went for a job doing taxes at a tax center in November of this. I am currently about to graduate from college with my degree in business administration with concentration in accounting. I received an email from the company telling me that they like my resume and all I had to do was to pass the intermediate and basic exams to get the job (I still have the emails from the tax company confirming this). Once I passed the test they emailed me telling me they would contact me within 3 business day of setting up my work schedule. Almost 2 weeks had passed and not a word. So I called Career Services (who were the ones that told me about the job in the first place) and told them that I haven't heard from them. Career Service called them back and then the weirdest thing happen; they said that the reason the tax company did not contact me because I would said that I would be unavailable to work Mondays to Fridays 1 pm to 6 pm from January 2013 to April 2013 and that they were only looking for someone to work those days. I was shocked beyond believe because it is impossible for me to have put that on the application. First of all, the application is doing online and that there are 7 boxes to check off when you would be unavailable. The 7 boxes were Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday, Saturday, and Sunday. I only checked off Friday from 1pm to 6 pm because I would be taking my final college course that day from that time. For them to say I checked off Monday to Friday was a bold face lie. Why would I checked that off those days when I am looking for a job? That is just impossible. I realized the police department and FBI used their influence to stop me from getting a job. (I also have the email conversations from Career Services telling me about the tax company responses).

So that is basically my story. I served in the army, been to Iraq, and I still get harass. I am 32 years old and still a virgin. I never broken the law and I have never been to jail. My record is clean and I still get harassed. It is definitely a conspiracy and I have good reason to believe racism is still playing a role in this. There has been a lot of incidents of racial profiling and racial discrimination by the cops in the United States.

I am currently in college about to graduate and then go on to graduate school to get 150 credit hours so I can take my CPA exam to become a Certified Public Accountant. It used to be 120 hours but the Enron scandal over here played a part in changing the credit hours to 150 in 2009.

Well you got my email address, so fell free to ask me any questions you have. I just wanted to let you know your not alone. Cops and the FBI are constantly falsely accusing innocent people. They control the media around here and have all the political influence to get away with it.

I can only hope and pray something happens to make it all end. Take care and I hope one day your situation gets better as well. I am rooting for you. Peace allan7737 says:

March 27, 2013 at 2:16 am

This is a comment to any of the discussion and i oppologize. I am being targeted. What happens is when I try to sleep at night. someone is directing some type of device, that causes about a 2 foot by 2 foot area to vibrate usually at my lower stomach area. sometimes the vibrations has caused me bad headaches and it feels like my stomach still shakes insides, after it stops which isn't very often. Is the device there using a low-intensity Taser or an electronic, wireless goad stick? I need help. CAN ANYONE HELP ME? Is there something I can use to defend myself against theses attacks? I feel it is slowly killing me. I am unable to sleep at night no matter where I go in my house they target me. Please help me anyone please. God bless you. Allan C.

Jeff says:

April 12, 2013 at 5:19 pm

All this has hit very close to home from personally a drill being used every night when I sleep, doors being slammed constantly, vibrations in my bed and constant recognition of vehicles following me around and what seems an attempt at causing me to wreck. Also a "That's him" being said by these ass holes pretty much every time I am in a store, out in my car ...basically just always. Whats really strange about it is that it is so obvious they WANT me to see and hear them say this.I need to know what I can do.

targeted.lv says:

April 18, 2013 at 10:19 am

Same story. Was gangstalked since interferred with "business" interests of a criminal gang with ties in government, police, judicial system. Was openly followed and taped (was told), was offered collaboration, joining a political party, even got a job in government, but after they (have no idea yet – who?) decided I am not "loyal", was severely mobbed at workplace, then in community. Around 2011 EH began. At the beginning was very sceptical, now have no doubt it is some kind of weaponry to harass, mostly psychologically. It is annoying, maybe can cause physical damage, but mostly seems to be psychological torture. Can get rid of sound and tremor only when moving around, in big shops with many people, in car, bus, in places with no mobile towers.

As I live in a very small country, know all gangstalkers' names, their ties, however, do not know how ex-kgb agents could be connected to western secret services, although there seems to be connection as ex-kgb agents were sent to study in austria, usa, norway, etc. It seems western services took kgb agents from soviets and work through political parties, ngo, different clubs (like rotary), trade cameras, agencies, judicial system, police, governmental, municipal offices, healthcare, educational establishments. Seems closely connected to criminal world and using criminals or homeless people. Some of gangstalkers are terribly afraid of me, so it is all not that simple. Besides, some people, involved in gangstalking, after exposure of their fraudulent schemes or stalking instances, were severely punished, some accidentally or suddenly died, some lost jobs, were accused or prosecuted, bankrupt, lost family members, had problems. Sometimes it seems I am a little worm to catch some bigger fish, and nobody cares what will happen to a worm.

Create a free website or blog at WordPress.com.